DEREEMER'S "WIND RIVER" CD BOTH A SUCCESS

Latest release from Cheyenne singer/songwriter shows his maturity and growth as a songwriter and musician

(Cheyenne, Wyoming)---Wyoming native Todd Dereemer is getting a lot of attention these days. Well known as one of Wyoming's most talented singer/songwriters, Dereemer's long-awaited second CD, "Wind Rivers" has already caught the attention of audiences throughout Wyoming and the Rocky Mountains. The CD is a simple, professional illustration of Dereemer's personal and professional growth as a songwriter and performer.

"I'm very pleased with the result," says Dereemer, sporting his classic boyish grin. "I've learned a lot over the past two years, and all of us have worked well together."

'All of us' refers to Mark Madsen, Dann Graham, Deanna Dyekman, and Nathan Matson, a talented ensemble of musicians that Dereemer brought in after the release of his first CD, "Horse Creek." Together the group transforms Dereemer's impeccable sense of humor and wicked lyrics into strong and at times quite powerful music. Dereemer has a unique sense of human nature and behavior that he somehow manages to translate into his lyrics, and the result is a feast for the ears and intelligence. As one listener states, "Todd's music gets better each time you hear it. You'll find something new for you to think about every time. It's that kind of depth that makes him high on my list of people to pay attention to."

Known for his talents as a songwriter, this CD offers insight into what drives Dereemer's passion about music and the world. The CD title, "Wind Rivers" is written for one of Dereemer's close friends whose sister disappeared in the Wind River Mountains near Lander, Wyoming in 1997. The song is a powerful, haunting illustration of the musician's ability to encompass the depths of human emotions and feelings in his work, a rare talent in today's homogenized and commercial music.
